ACTIVE INGREDIENTS / EFFECTS

High molecular weight hyaluronic acid: it forms a protective film on the surface of the skin, defending it from aggressive external agents (such as pollution).

Medium molecular weight hyaluronic acid: adheres to the skin surface, moisturizing and softening the stratum corneum.

Low molecular weight hyaluronic acid: penetrates deeply, improving and prolonging hydration.

Mandelic acid: mandelic acid is an aromatic organic acid that can be extracted from bitter almonds or prepared by chemical synthesis, belonging to the category of alpha-hydroxy-acids. Due to its chemical characteristics and superior molecular weight, mandelic acid penetrates more gradually and evenly through the skin than other alpha-hydroxy acids. In this way it is less irritating, for example, than glycolic acid, and more suitable for sensitive skin. Like other alpha-hydroxy-acids, it has benefits in the treatment of acne and hyperpigmentation. Thanks to the exfoliating action, mandelic acid helps: improve the appearance of surface lines and wrinkles, increase the brightness of the skin; promote the discoloration of dark spots; smooth scars, making them less noticeable; promote the synthesis of collagen, hyaluronic acid and blood flow; increase the absorption of other active ingredients present in the cosmetic.

Thermal salts: soothing and antioxidant properties.
